Harlan J. Berk, Ltd. has presented an innovation in antiquities and numismatics for some time now. The system is simple. When you want an antiquity or coin in the sale, just bid the estimated price by phone or mail. We will send you the antiquity or coin immediately. No waiting for the closing of the sale. Any and all antiquities or coins not sold before the closing date will be sent to the highest bidder on May 12, 1999.

EXAMPLE—You bid estimate on an item valued at $100.00 and if your bid is the 1st to reach us, you will receive the item immediately. If on the other hand, you bid $75.00 on the same item and are still the high bidder at the end of the sale, the item will be mailed to you on the closing date, May 12, 1999.

If you are ever in the area, stop in to see us! Of course, it's best to call first. Harlan J. Berk, Ltd. reserves the right to refuse any ridiculous bids.

This coin shows two unusual details which occur on none of the fifteen similar coins illustrated in the Berk photo file. On the obverse, the normal medallion at the top of the pearl diadem worn by the emperor is missing. On the reverse, three ties rather than the normal two hang down from the wreath held by the two Victories. F.D.C. ..... 2500

16. LEO I; 457-474 AD, Solidus, Constatinople, c. October 473 AD - January 474 AD, 4.39g, RIC-638 (R3), DO-533. Rx: SALVS REI RVBLICAE C Leo I and Leo II seated facing, cross and star in field above them, CONOB in ex. The meaning of the isolated C at the end of the reverse legend is uncertain: see Kent, RIC p.103. It can hardly refer to Leo II as Caesar, since the type depicts him as already wearing the crown of an Augustus. NFA 18 April 1987 no. 613 comments: The junior emperor, shown to right of Leo on the Reverse, is usually identified as Leo's grandson, Leo II, who was raised to the rank of Augustus in the latter part of 473. However, the figure of the junior emperor is not as diminutive as one would expect for a child-emperor. A more plausible interpretation would be that the slightly shorter figure represents the western emperor Anthemius, and that this rare issue was struck to commemorate his appointment by Leo to the vacant western throne in 467. Anthemius' own coinage in the west also depicts the two emperors, symbolizing the unity of the eastern and western governments. Extremely Rare; Flawless Obv portrait; Mint State ..... SOLD

On this specimen, Constantine's name removed, but Romanus' name remains clear.. Though my view on the obliterating of half the legend on this coin and on lot 49 is controversial, I believe that I am correct, not only because Constantine's name is obliterated and Romanus' is not, but also because the Obv die is that of the clear-eyed Christ with the hair swept back behind the head on the left rather than falling down to the shoulders; Mint State..... 2500

On this specimen, Constantine's name remains clear while Romanus' name is obliterated. Here the opposite happens of what happened on coin no. 48, doubtless because this is the beginning of the die mutilation and they were unsure as to how to accomplish their objective of obliteration to create a new issue for Romanus II..... 2500

THE WARS OF HANNIBAL SOUTH ITALIAN COINAGE AND THE SECOND PUNIC WAR

Rome's epic struggle against Carthage required three grueling wars, fought over the course of more than a century. At stake was control of the western Mediterranean, especially the rich mines of Spain and the agricultural bounty of Sicily. But the Second Punic War (218-201 BC) became a battle for Rome's very survival. The Carthaginian general Hannibal, one of history's great military geniuses, made a daring invasion of Italy in autumn of 218, crossing the Alps in autumn with 40,000 troops and a complement of war elephants. His plan was to foment revolt among Rome's Italian subjects and allies, offering himself as their leader. He enjoyed spectacular early successes in Northern Italy but was prevented from marching on Rome by the loyalty of the Central Italian towns and so proceeded to Southern Italy in 217. His disastrous defeat of a Roman army in the battle of Cannae (216) drove the South Italians to his banner, providing Hannibal with a secure base of supply and manpower which allowed him to menace Rome for many years.

Tarentum, the most important city of South Italy, was garrisoned by Rome and repelled two attacks by Hannibal. Rome executed five young Tarentine noblemen who had been held as hostages in Rome in 212 BC. This angered other young Tarentine noblemen, 13 of whom, lead by Philemenus disguised as hunters, walked into Hannibal's camp to make a deal with Hannibal. After several meetings it was decided that Philemenus' group would give the city over to Hannibal. He in turn would neither harm nor loot the person or property of any Tarentine citizen but would be allowed to murder and plunder any and al Roman citizens living in the city. For several weeks before the attack the conspirators would go out hunting at night, they would always return with game, some taken themselves, some given to them by Hannibal. On their return to the city they became so familiar with the Roman guards that all they had to do was whistle for the gates to be opened. The hunters (conspirators) would always share some of the game with the Roman guards. On the night that Hannibal took the city the Roman commander, Marcus Livius, held a banquet and got very drunk and two of the conspirators walked him home safely. Eighty Numidian horsemen captured farmers who lived outside the city so that they could not warn the Roman garrison of the coming of Hannibal. When Hannibal approached the city, one of the other chief conspirators named Nikon murdered the guards at the Temenidian gate and opened it to Hannibal. Other conspirators bearing an immense wild boar on a litter whistled and the guard as usual opened the gates allowing the hunters and their Carthaginians confederates to enter the city from a second place. Livius the Roman commander was awakened and managed to escape from the city, but true to his word Hannibal murdered almost all the Roman citizens and touched no Tarentine person at all. Hannibal held the city for three years.

But once more treachery turned the course of history, and in 209 Tarentum was again betrayed from within and sacked by a Roman army. The Roman recovery of this port city was the key to South Italy. A last desperate attempt to reinforce Hannibal failed in 207, and his final years in Italy were anticlimactic. The Romans simply left him bottled up in the mountain fastness of Bruttium until he was recalled to lead the defense of Carthage itself. Hannibal's occupation of Southern Italy had enormous impact on the local currency, stimulating a rash of mint activity at towns that rarely struck coinage. Tarentum and Metapontum, however, were important mints, and in each case their coinage under Carthaginian presence is reflected principally in a drastic reduction in the weight of the stater from about 6.6 grams to under four grams. While this weight reduction could have been occasioned by a shortage of silver, it seems more likely that it was intended to bring the local coinage into conformity with the Carthaginian weight standard. The final issues of Tarentum and Metapontum are also characterized by their late style, by a change in the obverse type at Metapontum, and by the signatures of non-Greek magistrates on the coins of Tarentum.

The coins struck by Hannibal in Tarentum were 1/4 Punic Shekels with the obverse Head of Persephone to left crowned with grain; reverse – Horse standing right in field beneath a pellet, linear border. These are the only distinctively Punic coins issued at Tarentum to commemorate Hannibal's brief occupation of one of the greatest cities in Magna Graecia.

Obv-Three hoplites in galley left, galley has horse's head at prow, griffin's head at stern; below, hippocamp left, Rx-Vulture with spread wings standing left on back of recumbant lamb incuse with head turned back In our culture the vulture means death. In the ancient Phoenician culture and the Egyptian culture, from which the Phoenicians borrowed this unique type, comes the real meaning of this exquisite and rare coin: the vulture is the symbol of the Goddess Nekhbet and is a symbol of protection and power. The short-horned ram with horns close to the head represents the god Amon Re, a symbol of Power and Military Strength (beginning in the 18th Dynasty). Taken in combination, this coin type means protection, power twice or double power and military strength, and that is reinforced by the obverse which shows three hoplites totally armed in a war galley going into battle with one of the denizens of the sea. Of this coin, there are less than 20 specimens in existence, and in this offering you are seeing one of the three best. This coin stands as one of the most unusual issues in the Greek series, not only does it use Egyptian hieroglyphs to tell its story but it is one of the only times in the Greek series when a relief and intaglio image appear on the same side of a coin. This side of this coin is the sharpest die of the several that have recently come to light, though the Obv is struck from a worn die; EF..... 14650

298. BRUTUS; Ides of March Denarius (plated), c. 43-42 BC, 3.10g, Cr-508/3, Syd-1301 (R9), C-15 (350 Fr.); Cahn, Quaderni ticinesi 1989, p.223 fig. 2 (same dies). Obv: BRVT IMP L PIAET (sic) CE[ST] Head of Brutus r. Rx: EID MAR Liberty cap and two daggers. With this famous reverse type Brutus commemorates his assassination of Julius Caesar on the notorious Ides of March, 44 BC, and claims that the deed was done to secure liberty for the Roman people (the liberty cap). This sentiment does not prevent him, however, from placing his own portrait on the coin, like a Hellenistic monarch and like Caesar himself shortly before his death! Our coin is a contemporary strike from unofficial dies, in competent style but with an engraver's error in the obverse legend, PIAET for PLAET. In his corpus of EID MAR denarii H.A. Cahn lists five such unofficial plated specimens, namely two in Paris and three in auction catalogues. The specimen that he illustrates, ex Muenzhandlung Base! 6, 1936, 1485, is from the same dies as ours. . Though this coin is rather ugly it still has a clearly defined portrait of Brutus with a clear name BRVT above the head; on the Rx, clearly defined are the two daggers which are on either side of the liberty cap and most of the legend EID MAR is quite clear with only the E being a partial letter. Top quality coins of this issue sell for as high as $135,000. At our estimate, this homely coin still represents a relevant opportunity for the collector who is not yet purchasing at the five to six figure level; VG/F. 5750

Very rare. The reverse type and Brutus' title Imperator commemorate his conquest of Lycia c. Spring 42 BC. The obverse legend names the legate of Brutus, C. Flavius Hemicillus?, who struck the coin for him and who may be identical with the Flavius whose death in the battle of Philippi Brutus lamented before committing suicide there himself, according to Plutarch. The reverse legend means "The remission of the fortieth" and seems to refer to Galba's remission of the 2 1/2% customs duty for Spain and Gaul. The rare Spanish-mint asses bearing this legend normally show an officer escorting three prisoners through the arch, presumably revenue officers of Nero who had plundered the provinces and were punished by Galba at the beginning of his reign. Our coin without the prisoners is by far the rarer of the two variants, probably known in only a couple of specimens apart from that in Paris; the British Museum, Trau, and Ryan collections, for example, lacked this variant, though they had the variant with prisoners. Obv and Rx-CERES S-C, Ceres standing left, draped and veiled, holding wheat ears and long torch. Our reverse dies might also have been engraved for Faustina I during her lifetime (BM Pl. 24.8) or for Faustina II under Marcus Aurelius (BM Pl. 74,5), but the stylistic match with these coins seems less close. Cf. BMC, pp. cxi-cvii: "The curious pieces with two obverse or two reverse types combined begin to occur not infrequently in this reign (Trajan) - the two reverses definitely less often than the two obverses. They have not yet been explained. They seem to be not absolutely accidental, but something in the nature of trial pieces or presentation pieces at the mint." Such coins are always asses, and those combining two reverse types are extremely rare, the British Museum possessing only five examples: 2 Trajan (nos.

1077 A-B, Pl. 44,3), and 1 each of Hadrian (no. 1841B), Faustina II under Marcus Aurelius (no. 1005), and Commodus (no. 727, pl. 111,8). Coins with two obverse types have not infrequently been manufactured by modern forgers, but our specimen with two reverses is finely preserved, evenly patinated, and unquestionably ancient and authentic. Obv: GENIVS P R Head of Genius of the Roman People, but with facial features of Gallienus, radiate and wearing mural crown. Rx: INT VRB S C in wreath. Ex St. John's College collection. Rare: the corpus published by D. Yonge, "The So-Called Interregnum Coinage", Num. Chronicle 139, 1979, includes 71 specimens of this coin from 23 obverse and 22 reverse dies. Our specimen is from Yonge's obverse die V, pl. 9, but a new reverse die. The radiate crown on the obverse indicates that this is a double sestertius; the same types were also struck as a sestertius, on somewhat lighter flans and with a laurel wreath replacing the radiate crown. The precise dating and occasion of these remarkable anonymous bronze coins is uncertain: Gallienus seem to be assimilated to the Spirit of the Roman People, and the wreath on the reverse may have been voted to him by the Senate on the occasion of his entrance into Rome, though it is difficult to propose a satisfactory expansion of the abbreviated words INT VRB. In RIC these coins are wrongly assigned to the interregnum following the death of Aurelian in 275 AD: the regular bronze coinage had ended by that time and the few rare pieces that were still struck are of a different style and module. F..... 750

Very rare, probably fewer than 15 known; not in the Mazzini or Gerin collections or the Berk photo file. The reverse type is also historically important: it seems to commemorate the incorporation of enemy territory into the Roman empire, for its legend calls Maximinus "The Jovian Extender of the Boundaries of the World". Apparently the type refers to a campaign by Maximinus against the Persians which is not recorded in the literary sources, since we know from inscriptions that Galerius and Maximinus accepted the title "Persicus Maximus for the third time" sometime between 306 and 311 (T.D. Barnes, The New Empire of Diocletian and Constantine, p. 66). The date of the proposed campaign depends on the attribution of our reverse type to 310 AD. Maximinus' title "Iovius", which he had taken over from his "Jovian" predecessors Diocletian and Galerius, is a further noteworthy feature of our coin, for the only other coin on which it appears is a unique bronze medallion from the Aquileia mint in Paris, C-134 (illustrated)=Gnecchi pl. 129,5. ### Stone Sculpture

- 867. Limestone Stella, Roman, c. 1st to 2nd cent AD. Stelli would originally have been fixed into a wall or roof and suspended overhead for votive purposes. This fixture depicts a facing male bust with simplistic features and a thick mass of bangs across the forehead. H. 14 1/2", W. 10"..... 2000
- 868. Roman Marble Grave Stone, Roman Republican Period to Early First cent AD. It commemorates the life of the child Q. Lollianus, a member of the family Lollii, of Rome. The epitaph indicates this child lived to seven years, five months, and five days. At either side of the inscription are two attendant amoretti, their tender and youthful presence poignantly transferred. Carved in relief, both face inward in contra-posto position. Each holds a tall spear and a prize game, one a duck, the other a rabbit. A marble grave marker such as this, in all likelihood, could only have been afforded by aristocracy. The ranks of the family Lolli included significant honorary figures such as Lollius Palicanus, elected tribune of the people, c. 70 BC, and acclaimed for having returned magisterial power to that office after it had been removed by Sulla. One of Palicanus' descendants is recorded to have been a moneyer in 45 BC, while another was Consul under Augustus in 21 BC and Governor of Gaul five years later. H. 16 3/4", W. 10 3/4"..... 15000
- 869. An Incredible Marble Head of Gnaeus Domitius Corbulo, a miniature masterpiece of Roman portraiture, c. 1st cent AD. Corbulo, a famous Roman general who served under Claudius and Nero, was considered the greatest general of his time. Under Claudius, in 47 AD, he was made legate of Germania Inferior and warred victoriously against the Chauci led by Gannascus. He also assumed the position of Proconsul of Asia. Later, under Nero, he was awarded the title of legatus of Cappadocia and Galatia. He reorganized the Roman army in the East, and in 52 AD waged successful campaigns against Parthia to retain control over Armenia. He then introduced a new Armenian king, Tigranes. In 62 AD, however, Tigranes was removed, and war resumed. Corbulo intervened again in 63 AD and successfully restored Roman prestige, achieving a Roman protectorate for the Armenian throne. Ironically, in 66 AD, a jealous and shrewd Nero plotted for Corbulo's death. He invited him to Corinth. Landing in Greece, apprised of the betrayal, the general sacrificed himself with his own sword, exclaiming the words "Well deserved". This is a true master piece of Roman portraiture. The dignitary's features are in fact so exacting and captivating that his character transcends the lifelike image. Immediately, one submits to the penetrating and piercing gaze of his eyes from beneath a thick, weighted brow, his facial expression indicating thoughtful resolve. Highly desirable, marble portraits of this caliber are seldom seen outside of a museum. Lower edge of the left ear missing. H. 3 1/8"..... 17500

870. Marble Bust of King Midas, Roman, 2nd to 3rd cent AD. The mythological Midas was the wealthy king of Phrygian. Silenus, the teacher and companion to the god Dionysus, was captured and brought to Midas, who welcomed him and led him back to Dionysus. Dionysus told Midas, in gratitude, that he would grant him one wish. Although wealthy Midas was exceedingly greedy and asked that all he touched be turned into gold, his wish was granted, and he turned his clothing to gold. He picked up a branch and turned it into gold, but when he wanted to eat, his bread turned to hard gold and his soup to liquid gold. Realizing his folly he returned to Dionysus and begged the god to take back his favor. Dionysus told him to go to the headwaters of the Pactolus River and immerse himself in the water to wash away the curse. He did this and ever since the sands of the river have held an abundance of gold. According to myth, Midas was asked to be one of the judges when the satyr Marsyas challenged the god Apollo to a music contest. All the judges but Midas voted for Apollo. The god in his wrath flayed Marsyas and caused Midas ears to change into the ears of an ass. Midas hid his secret under a Phrygian cap so that none might see his disgrace. His barber, however, knew the secret and was bursting with desire to blurt it out. The barber whispered Midas' secret into a hole in the ground so that no one might hear. Reeds grew over the spot and when the wind rustled over them they whispered for all to hear "Midas has asses' ears". The bust shows Midas the Phrygian cap and asses ears. Some remaining red color. Busts of King Midas are quite rare. Restored from two fragments. H. 13", W. 14 1/2"..... 15000
